

Guide to Care and Cleaning

Thank you for your recent Herbeau fireclay sink purchase. Continuing a tradition of handcrafted quality dating back to 1857, Herbeau fireclay sinks are designed to be strong, durable and virtually maintenance-free. The following guidelines will help your sink stay beautiful for many years to come.

Regular cleaning with a mild soap and soft sponge will help keep your fireclay sink looking like new. Simply rinse out the sink thoroughly after each use and wipe dry.

462320 Petite Luberon Fireclay Sink

Herbeau fireclay sinks resist chips, stains and scratches better than cast iron or stainless steel. Stains like coffee, tea, red wine, fruit juice, etc. can be treated with a mild gel or cleanser. We recommend the "ASTONISH" brand fireclay cleaner.

4609 20 Fireclay Drop-In Sink & 4610 20 Fireclay Prep Sink

For stubborn stains, mix together a solution of 50% bleach, 50% water, and let stand in the bottom of the sink for one hour. Drain the water, then use a sponge or soft to rub out the stain.

*For best results, avoid harsh abrasive cleansers or pads, as they will dull the surface of the sink.***

What is Fireclay?

Fireclay is a natural mineral material consisting of clay, silica and ash.* The master craftsmen at Herbeau use a white clay from the Limoges region of France. This type of clay is prized for its purity and texture.

First the clay is mixed with water to a honey-like consistency, then poured into a two-piece plaster mold. After the clay dries, both molds are opened and the sink is removed. The sink is then sponged to achieve a smooth finish and air-dried to prevent cracking. Once the sink has dried, a thick layer of glaze is applied by hand.

The glaze fuses with the clay, resulting in a smooth, lustrous finish. The sink is then sprayed with a mixture of finely ground glass, water and cellulose binder and put into a kiln, where it is fired at 2300°F.

*Due to the organic nature of fireclay, size variations of up to ¼ inch may occur. For best results, Herbeau recommends the sink be re-measured prior to installation in a cabinet or countertop.
